

Jack Martin

Jack Martin has served over three decades in law enforcement, both in the adult and juvenile arenas.

Mr. Martin began his career in California before transitioning to both Arizona and Hawaii as a subject matter expert to assist those State's successfully rebuild their troubled youth correctional systems. Mr. Martin moved to Nevada in 2009 as the Chief of the Youth Parole Bureau and then accepted the position as the Director over the Clark County Department of Juvenile Justice Services until he retired in August 2023.

Mr. Martin has transitioned to a full-time consultant working within the technology field helping design critical software utilizing his extensive experience in law enforcement. Mr. Martin earned his degrees in Criminal Justice Administration, Communications, and a Master's in Public Policy.

He is a national speaker for operational issues surrounding cultural change initiatives within law enforcement agencies, and an expert in designing and teaching necessary classes for all working in the justice system, whether adult or juvenile. Mr. Martin is married to his high school sweetheart and enjoys raising his sons and building motorcycles and classic cars.