ABOUT ME:

I am currently a third-year student at Caucasus University, studying at the Caucasus School of Economics. Alongside my academic journey, I have gained valuable work experience in the financial banking sector, where I was involved in analyzing business structures and conducting financial analytics. I am passionate about economics and finance and aim to build a strong career in this field. Outside of my studies and professional interests, I enjoy playing football, horseback riding, and traveling, which help me stay active and open to new experiences. One of my proudest achievements was developing and presenting a business idea that received high recognition through the International Baccalaureate (IB) program. I consider myself a goal-driven and hardworking individual, always committed to personal and professional growth.
