ABOUT ME:

I am a second-year student at Caucasus University, majoring in International Relations. I am particularly interested in diplomacy, global politics, and international cooperation. In the future, I aim to pursue a career in international organizations or the diplomatic field. I actively participate in educational events and activities related to exchange programs. Learning foreign languages is very important for my professional goals—currently, I am studying French and planning to learn Chinese as well. The wide international network of partner universities at Caucasus University gives me additional motivation on this path. In my free time, I enjoy reading literature, writing, creating content and participating in various programs, that reflect both my interests and personality.
