ABOUT ME:

Hello, my name is Mariam Dzagnidze, I have graduated from Newton Free School. As of today, I am a second-year student at the Faculty of Diplomacy and International Relations at Caucasus University. I have been involved in many activities since school. I try my best to accept challenges that will help me apply my knowledge and develop my leadership skills. In addition to the university, I am also a member of the Thinking Academy team. In my free time, I study defence policy and explore many sources and literature about it. I especially love discovering new interests and exchanging ideas with the community. Moreover, I have been involved in a hotel business which is owned by my family since childhood, where I gained valuable work experience and interacted with many foreign people. Through communication with them, I learned about their culture and customs, which inspired me to pursue my childhood dream—to travel, explore, and study as many languages as possible. I am currently studying French and I have a great desire to continue my studies in France. The Ambassador Program will give me the opportunity to meet international students, help them adapt, and create an interesting student life. I am glad that Caucasus University creates an environment where we can gain a wealth of experience that will help us develop our future career advancement.
