ABOUT ME:

Hello, I am Mariam Varazashvili, a student of the English-language integrated bachelor's and master's medical program (2024–2030) at Caucasus University, pleased to have the opportunity to represent my university as a CU ambassador. Being passionate about medical science, global collaboration, and active student engagement. I have participated in scientific conferences and research projects, which have helped me develop my communication and leadership skills. I am a recipient of a state grant awarded on the basis of academic success. I believe that intercultural communication and the promotion of education are essential for personal and professional development. In my free time, I really enjoy reading psychological and classical literature, participating in volunteer activities, and exploring different cultures. Also skilled in photography and especially love capturing moments that may seem ordinary or mundane at first glance but, to me, reveal a special beauty and meaning. In my role as a CU ambassador, I will strive to inspire other students and contribute to promoting the opportunities and values of our university.
