

Mariam Sitchinava, Tamar Karchava, Tatia Kurtsikidze

University of Gdansk, Poland

On May 19–23, 2025, in the city of Gdansk, Poland, within the framework of the administrative mobility of the Erasmus+ program, representatives of the Caucasus University School of Medicine—Tamar Karchava, Administrative Director of the PhD Program in Law Tatia Kurtsikidze, as well as a representative of Student Services and Learning Process Monitoring Department, Mariam Sitchinava—participated in both academic activities and cultural and educational processes at the University of Gdansk, Poland.

Within the framework of the program, the participants had the opportunity to become acquainted with the history of the city of Gdansk, local culture, and traditions. A seminar was also held on raising awareness and reducing stress, in which the participants were actively involved. Representatives of Caucasus University participated in various planned administrative activities within the framework of the International Week.

The purpose of the visit was to share experience, academic practices, and deepen cooperation between universities. Representatives of higher education institutions from different countries participated in the event. The participants presented their universities, exchanged information on educational systems and institutional specifics, which contributes to the improvement of educational processes and deepens cooperation with universities from different countries.