From 24 to 28 November, within the framework of the Erasmus+ International Staff Training Week mobility, representatives of the Caucasus University administration: Tinatin Giorgadze, Administrative Director of Academic Programs at the School of Economics, and Senior Managers of the Student Services and Learning Process Monitoring Department, Mariam Ekizashvili and Ana Vekua, visited the University of Tuscia in Italy.

Within the Erasmus+ mobility program, discussions focused on issues related to internationalization and global challenges, as well as interactive ice-breaking and networking activities within double degree programs. Together with the Erasmus+ Department Coordinators of the University of Tuscia and representatives of their partner international universities, the delegation from Caucasus University took part in a roundtable organized to explore ways to strengthen existing double degree agreements and to identify opportunities for developing new partnerships.

It is noteworthy that the representatives of Caucasus University gained valuable experience in the field of internationalization. The Erasmus + International Staff Training Week mobility program brought together administrative representatives from universities of various countries, which was important both for sharing existing practices and for establishing potential future collaborations.
