

Keti Gigolashvili

University of Szczecin, Poland

„From April 7 to 11, 2025, within the framework of the Erasmus+ staff mobility program, I had the opportunity to participate in the International Staff Week organized by the University of Szczecin.

During the mobility, I attended a number of training sessions focused on the ethical use of artificial intelligence in academic spaces, along with other relevant and timely topics. We also visited the university's radio and television studios, which are entirely student-centered and designed to support their hands-on learning. This visit was particularly impressive and inspiring for me. I had the chance to present the CSM School's student radio from Caucasus University, which generated significant interest among the University of Szczecin representatives.

In addition to the intensive professional meetings, we were given the opportunity to explore the university's modern, technology-rich library and visit the University of Szczecin's Doctoral School. There, we met with both the administrative team and international doctoral students — an exchange I found professionally and personally enriching.

One of the most memorable aspects of the week was the interaction with fellow participants from various countries. We shared professional insights and exchanged perspectives on the week's central topics.

As part of the program, a cultural excursion to the city was also organized, offering participants a deeper understanding of the city's rich history.”