Maka Amaghlobeli, Lana Gogichashvili

Vilnius University Lithuania

From May 12–16, 2025, in Vilnius, Lithuania, within the framework of the administrative mobility of the Erasmus+ program, representative of the Caucasus University School of Medicine, Maka Amaghlobeli, and the representative of Student Services and Learning Process Monitoring, Lana Gogichashvili, participated in academic activities, as well as cultural and educational events organized by Vilnius University.

At the beginning of the program, participants had the opportunity to learn about the history of Lithuania, its local culture, and traditions. They were also introduced to the Lithuanian language, which was particularly interesting from both linguistic and cultural perspectives. Communication strategies and modern challenges in international cooperation were discussed during the working meetings.

As part of the program, the participants visited the old campus of Vilnius University, renowned for its unique architecture and historical heritage, as well as the Saulėtekis campus, where they became acquainted with the university's modern educational infrastructure. In addition, they visited the Vilnius University Library, noted for its advanced facilities and wide range of services that provide comprehensive academic support for both students and faculty.

This type of mobility fully supports the goals of the Erasmus+ program—promoting the exchange of international experience, cultural interaction, and professional development in the field of higher education.
