Bachelors program in Tourism

University of Rovira I Virgili, Spain

Spring 2025, which I spent in Tarragona, Spain, turned out to be much more than a semester abroad — it was an invaluable experience and an adventure that I will always connect with some of the brightest and happiest moments of my life.

Thanks to the Erasmus+ scholarship, I had the chance to learn about tourism and hospitality from experienced professors representing different countries and perspectives. The cultural diversity of the program made every subject more engaging. Day after day, I was involved in discussions and projects on topics that truly mattered to me. The academic environment was highly interactive, where teamwork and debates provided more than theoretical knowledge — they offered real insights and skills. In addition, I was given the opportunity to visit some of Catalonia’s leading hotels, an experience that enriched my professional vision.

Equally significant were the friendships I built. I shared six unforgettable months with people who became an important part of my life. Traveling together, spending evenings in each other’s company, or simply talking created memories that left a lasting mark and helped me discover new perspectives about myself. Tarragona, despite being a small city, allowed me to grow both academically and personally, and it taught me the true value of independence. Every day was filled with cultural surprises. It is a place where boredom does not exist and which will always remain my second home.

Ultimately, joining this exchange program was one of the best decisions I have ever made. Representing myself and my country, adapting to a completely new environment, turning strangers into unforgettable friends, embracing cultural diversity, gaining independence, and facing challenges that inspire growth — all of these aspects made the program an exceptional experience that has profoundly enriched my student life.
