From my very first year, I set studying abroad with the Erasmus+ exchange program as one of my main goals. I always imagined myself studying in another country, and I worked hard to make it happen.

Living in Spain had always been a dream of mine, and in the spring semester of 2025, it finally came true. My time in Valencia became a real transformation for me - both academically and personally.

Working with international professors was an exciting challenge. Studying abroad changed the way I look at my field: I discovered new approaches, developed new perspectives, and found inspiration in seeing architecture every day in ways I hadn't experienced before.

Life in Spain was also a big personal challenge - the bittersweet joy of living alone in a completely new city. Erasmus helped me understand myself better, to discover day by day who I am and what I am capable of. And intercultural exchange, I would say, was the most fascinating part, because it is through meeting people with different perspectives that you learn and uncover many truths.

Looking back, I realize Erasmus was the best decision of my life. Despite all the challenges, every moment was worth it. To every student I say - take the risk!
