Eka Akobia

Lund University, Sweden

On November 2-6, 2026, a delegation from Caucasus University, comprising Professor Eka Akobia, Dean of the Caucasus School of Governance, and Nana Sharikadze, Affiliated Associate Professor at the Caucasus School of Humanities and Social Sciences, visited Lund University, Sweden, as part of an Erasmus+ academic mobility programme.

The visit brought together Georgian and Swedish academics for guest lectures, scholarly discussions, and exchanges on European integration, international relations, and contemporary political developments.

As part of the academic programme, Professor Akobia delivered a guest lecture titled “CFSP Alignment in the Eastern Partnership: Ukraine, Moldova and Georgia” to students of the Master's Programme in European Studies (MAPES). The lecture examined the alignment of the three Eastern Partnership countries with the European Union's Common Foreign and Security Policy (CFSP), highlighting their divergent trajectories and the political implications for European integration as well as the need for further research to ascertain causality in the existing empirical patterns.

Professor Akobia also participated as a speaker in the seminar “Reflections on a Fading European Dream in Georgia,” alongside scholars from Tbilisi State University, Political Science and International Relations departments. The discussion addressed Georgia's democratic backsliding, its changing relationship with the European Union, and the domestic and geopolitical challenges affecting the country's European integration prospects.

The academic mobility programme also included participation in EU Days Lund 2026, providing opportunities for engagement with European policy debates and the wider academic community.

As part of the programme, meetings were held with Anamaria Dutceac Segesten, Senior Lecturer in European Studies at Lund University, to discuss opportunities for further academic collaboration. The visit contributed to strengthening international academic dialogue, sharing research perspectives, and fostering cooperation between Caucasus University and Lund University.On November 2–6, 2026, a delegation from Caucasus University, comprising Professor Eka Akobia, Dean of the Caucasus School of Governance, and Nana Sharikadze, Affiliated Associate Professor at the Caucasus School of Humanities and Social Sciences, visited Lund University, Sweden, as part of an Erasmus+ academic mobility programme.

The visit brought together Georgian and Swedish academics for guest lectures, scholarly discussions, and exchanges on European integration, international relations, and contemporary political developments.

As part of the academic programme, Professor Akobia delivered a guest lecture titled “CFSP Alignment in the Eastern Partnership: Ukraine, Moldova and Georgia” to students of the Master's Programme in European Studies (MAPES). The lecture examined the alignment of the three Eastern Partnership countries with the European Union's Common Foreign and Security Policy (CFSP), highlighting their divergent trajectories and the political implications for European integration as well as the need for further research to ascertain causality in the existing empirical patterns.

Professor Akobia also participated as a speaker in the seminar “Reflections on a Fading European Dream in Georgia,” alongside scholars from Tbilisi State University, Political Science and International Relations departments. The discussion addressed Georgia's democratic backsliding, its changing relationship with the European Union, and the domestic and geopolitical challenges affecting the country's European integration prospects.

The academic mobility programme also included participation in EU Days Lund 2026, providing opportunities for engagement with European policy debates and the wider academic community.

As part of the programme, meetings were held with Anamaria Dutceac Segesten, Senior Lecturer in European Studies at Lund University, to discuss opportunities for further academic collaboration. The visit contributed to strengthening international academic dialogue, sharing research perspectives, and fostering cooperation between Caucasus University and Lund University.