

Giorgi Akhalaia

University of Alcalá, Spain

Within the framework of Erasmus+ academic staff mobility, the affiliated professor of the School of Technology at Caucasus University, Giorgi Akhalaia, visited the University of Alcalá in Spain. During the visit, the lecturer was hosted by Associate Professor Daniel Rodríguez from the Department of Computer Science and Artificial Intelligence at the University of Alcalá.

As part of the program, lectures on cybersecurity and meetings with doctoral students from the professor's program were organized for the lecturer. The main focus was on reviewing threats related to artificial intelligence and analyzing existing approaches to addressing them.

In addition to lectures and academic activities, meetings were held with various academic staff members from the Department of Computer Science. During these meetings, the professor became familiar with the University of Alcalá's programs, institutional structure, and ongoing activities. Furthermore, discussions covered potential topics for future joint research, particularly addressing shared challenges, issues, threats, and prospects in the fields of machine learning and cybersecurity.