From April 13 to 17, representatives of Caucasus University: Lika Tsetskhladze, Assistant to the Director of the Law Department, and Lela Ekizashvili, Head of the Student Financial Services Center participated in an Erasmus+ administrative staff mobility within the framework of the International Week program at Kauno Kolegija, in Lithuania.

The International Week brought together participants from various countries, creating a diverse and interdisciplinary environment. The program included a wide range of workshops and interactive sessions, as well as conferences and presentations addressing contemporary challenges in education, innovative teaching methods, the impact of globalization, and the importance of international cooperation. The sessions were particularly engaging and dynamic, providing participants with the opportunity to actively contribute to discussions, share their experiences, and gain new knowledge.

An important part of the program was dedicated to exploring the university's campuses and faculties. Participants were given the opportunity to gain in-depth insight into academic programs, infrastructure, and teaching practices. This process was valuable both for sharing best practices and for identifying potential directions for future collaboration.

The main objective of the International Week was to strengthen professional and academic connections among participants and to facilitate the exchange of ideas. The experience gained and the contacts established during the mobility period provide a strong foundation for future cooperation, contributing to institutional development and creating new opportunities for both students and academic staff.
