

Ana Arabuli

France, Lille Catholic University

Caucasus School of Governance

"Getting an education is one of my main priorities, therefore, I always try to make the most of the opportunities offered by Caucasus University. Besides that, one of my goals was to join the "Erasmus +" program and study abroad. When I won the university's internal competition and was given the opportunity to study in France, I was very happy - it meant achieving my goal and gaining new experiences.

I studied at Lille Catholic University in France, namely ESPOL (European School of Political and Social Sciences). I must mention that one of the most interesting subjects for me was 'EU Law and Institutions'. I think this subject is interesting and practical, because I studied in detail the working system of EU institutions, which is quite useful in today's reality, considering that Georgia is involved in the process of obtaining the status of a candidate for EU membership.

As for student life, it is quite diverse. There are many clubs in the university, which are organized by the students themselves according to their interests. I really liked the debate club and the 'campus market', where second-hand clothes and plants were sold.

I always spent my free time with my course mates. I met a lot of people from different parts of the world in the city of Lille. I never get tired of hearing interesting stories from them about their countries and traditions. Along with that, I traveled to other countries besides France, such as Belgium and the Netherlands.

I think I got a lot of experience. First, I got to know myself much better, learned to communicate better with people and became more confident about my education. It's also nice to know that so far away from me, there is a small town that I know like the back of my hand. I'm sure I'll analyze more from my trip as time goes on, but regardless, I'm very pleased to have been a part of this program."