„I have become interested in the exchange programs of Caucasus University during my enrollee period, which has significantly impacted my future choice. Despite the fact that I have been preparing for the Erasmus+ program since the first year of my studies and had realized that in case of studying well, I would spend one semester abroad, leaving far from my family and friends has still been the hardest part of it.

I have been very lucky with my host University, because it was not only oriented on a good quality of learning, but it was also concentrated on bringing students together and team building activities, so I met my fellow students during the orientation meeting before the classes have started. Team building activities, games, picnics and sport competitions, rewarding prizes and lastly 3-hour boat tour on Danube river with the students, who have become the part of my everyday life even after returning back to Georgia. This has definitely been the best start of the semester.

The teaching methods between METU and CU has been different to some extent, but this has not hindered me to finish the semester successfully. Furthermore, I was trying to be an active student, and Hungarian professors have evaluated this positively.

At the end of this program, I think that this is the chance, that students should not miss, even when the reasons are quite vast. This is a chance of coming to know yourself better, discovering your strengths and weaknesses, to learn new language and culture, to meet lots of interesting people, to earn new friends, to travel and develop personally and career wise.”
