„My lifetime ambition was to participate in the Erasmus+ exchange program. After two interesting, challenging courses at the Caucasus University, I was granted the opportunity to continue my studies for one semester in a completely different atmosphere and in a new country, in Slovenia's capital, Ljubljana.

The University of Ljubljana's Faculty of Business and Economics is renowned for its lengthy history and high global position among top colleges and universities. One of the most notable benefits of the exchange program was the opportunity to experience diverse learning techniques and lifestyles, which was followed by a lot of traveling, making new contacts, and personal development.

Going to another country for a semester and living independently turned out to be quite easy and natural for me, which was further aided by the presence of my fellow Caucasus University students, who have since become my greatest friends.

Academic advancement and the experience obtained from living in Slovenia fueled my desire to continue my studies abroad and return to Georgia with the knowledge I had gained.”
