

Salome Nadiradze

University of Ljubljana, Slovenia

„It all started when I enrolled at the Caucasus School of Business and it was right here that I began to discover countless opportunities. I have always believed that studying abroad would not only be about learning outcome, but also about personal growth and skills development. It opens doors to a world of possibilities and enriches one's life in countless ways.

With this motivation, I joined the Erasmus+ program in the 4th year of the studies which turned out to be one of the best decisions in my life and I recommend it to all students without hesitation.

I spent almost half a year as part of the exchange program at the Faculty of Business and Economics of the University of Ljubljana, Slovenia. University of Ljubljana is one of the oldest and largest universities in Slovenia, known for its quality education and research, it should also be noted that the university obtains triple crown accreditation - AACSB, AMBA, EQUIS.

Adapting to a foreign environment was difficult at first due to the new rhythm of life and different educational system. However, stepping out of my comfort zone on a daily basis has led to significant personal growth and self-discovery. My time in Slovenia was full of spontaneous adventures such as unplanned trips, various professional meetings. The multifunctional learning environment, international lecturers, group projects with international students improved my intercultural communication skills. Overall, all of this has significantly increased my global knowledge in the field of business.

I would like to thank the Erasmus+ program and especially to Caucasus University, for this unique experience and constant support.”
