

Tamar Shengelia

Universitat Rovira I Virgili, Spain

On May 20-24, within the Erasmus+ Administrative personnel mobility program, I visited Universitat Rovira i Virgili, Spain.

Mobility consisted of 1 working week, within which, I had the opportunity to share experience and information regarding the important challenges in the field of education. Meetings were planned with the colleagues of the partner university, from human resources department, with the director of the research and innovations department, with the team of the training and development department, career and alumni department, as well as, with other representatives of the different administrative units. During the mobility I also visited campus Reus, where I got familiarized with the local labor market and the preconditions for alumni to join the industry marketplace.

Within the above-mentioned meetings, both parties were given the opportunity to share with each other the current practice and approaches used at the Universities and to discuss possible areas of collaboration. The program was an excellent occasion to receive and share new knowledge and experience for establishing the future partnership.