Sopot University of Applied Sciences, Poland

„A representative of the administrative staff of Caucasus University, Monika Kvaratskhelia, participated in the Erasmus+ exchange program and was in Poland, at the Sopot University of Applied Sciences, as part of the International Administrative Week.

The purpose of the visit was to exchange experiences between universities, share academic practices and deepen cooperation. Representatives of higher education institutions from different countries participated in the event. The participants presented their universities, exchanged information on educational systems and institutional specifics.

The representative of Caucasus University presented the university's structure, academic programs and international partnership experience at the meetings. Within the framework of the program, the participants actively engaged in workshops, team activities and interactive sessions, which contributed to the establishment of networking connections and intensive sharing of professional experience.

The program included both academic and cultural and social components. Participants were able to get to know each other better in an informal setting, which was an additional opportunity to strengthen relationships and develop future cooperation initiatives.

International experience is especially important for academic staff, as it develops a global perspective, contributes to the improvement of educational processes and deepens cooperation with universities in different countries. This is one of the important pillars on the path to providing quality and modern education.”
