

Biography

Givi Adamia is a legal scholar and practitioner, and an Affiliated Assistant Professor at the Caucasus School of Law, Caucasus University. His main research areas include competition law, energy law, and civil law.

Alongside his academic work, since 2017 he has been a member of the Georgian Bar Association and a licensed attorney specializing in civil and administrative law. His many years of practical experience include leading positions in both the public and private sectors. He has extensive local and international experience in private legal practice, enforcement of competition law, regulation of the energy sector, and civil/corporate law. He is also the author of a number of academic publications in these fields.

He is actively involved in teaching on the undergraduate and graduate programs of the Caucasus School of Law, where he delivers lecture courses in subjects such as Introduction to Civil Law, Property Law, General Part of the Law of Obligations, Statutory Obligational Relationships, Competition Law, and others.

He defended his dissertation on the topic: Qualification of Exclusive Vertical Restraints as Anti-Competitive Agreements and Their Legal Consequences under Georgian, German, and European Union Competition Law.

Publications

1. Exaggeration of Information as a Circumstance Excluding the Classification of Advertising as an Unfair Commercial Practice (co-authored)
2. The Essence of Unbundling and Its Function in Energy Law
3. Compatibility of Standardization Agreements with EU Competition Law: Legal Insights
4. The Separation of Competition Law Enforcement Powers Between Competition and Regulatory Authorities in Georgia
5. Prospects for the Private Enforcement of Competition Law in Georgia: The Example of Abuse of Dominant Position (in Georgian and German)
6. Constitutional Aspects of Economic Competition (in Georgian and English)
7. The Concept of Economic Agent in Georgian Competition Law (in Georgian and English)
8. The Problem of Qualifying State Action as State Aid under Georgian and European Union Competition Law