The Mazovian Academy in Płock, Poland

„In April of this year, with the support of the Caucasus University, I was given the opportunity to spend a week at The Mazovian Academy in the small Polish town - Płock within the framework of the Erasmus+ staff mobility for teaching program.

Although I have been to Poland many times before, the mobility mentioned above turned out to be very interesting and memorable, because it was my first academic mobility within the Erasmus+ program.

During the mobility period, I had the opportunity to meet local students and professors. The interdisciplinarity of the lectures I planned within the framework of the program aroused the interest and high interaction of the students, which pleasantly surprised me. In addition to the lectures, I met the administration and academic staff of the host faculty. We talked about common academic interests and prospects for future cooperation.

Poland is an advanced country in Eastern and Central Europe with growing dynamics of economic and urban development. That is why such mobility of Georgian academic personnel in this country is very important, because we have the opportunity to observe and analyze the important circumstances of Poland's development from an academic point of view.

Many thanks to the European Union and Caucasus University for this opportunity!”
