

Giorgi Tskhadaia

Mykolas Romeris University, Vilnius

"As part of the Erasmus+ academic mobility program, I visited Mykolas Romeris University in Vilnius, where I conducted a lecture on philosophical theories of cosmopolitanism as part of Professor Andrius Bielski's Classical and Modern Political Theories course. During the lecture, I reviewed the main theories of liberal cosmopolitanism and their weaknesses; I also talked about ways to overcome theoretical difficulties. As part of Dr. Ruta Slidziauskaite's course History and Case studies in Global Security, I gave a lecture on philosophical theories of nationalism. Within the lecture, I talked about the possibility of a normative theory of nationalism and reviewed David Miller's theory of liberal nationalism; I talked about the weaknesses of this theory and the ways out."