SGH-Warsaw School of Economics

„With the Erasmus+ staff mobility for teaching program, I was at the Warsaw School of Economics, which is the best university in Poland in this regard.

The university was very welcoming and organized. I conducted 4 two-hour lectures on economic dependence on Russia. I shared Georgian experience with students and professors in this regard. Due to the topic, the lectures caused great interest. all classes were international, there were both Polish and International students from all parts of Europe as well as America and from East Asia.

I've met Georgian students, who are participants of the Erasmus exchange program, one is a student of the Economics School of the Caucasus University, the other is a student of the GIPA Economics Program. I also shared the information about Caucasus University and Georgia to professors and students, many of them expressed their desire to visit our Country. In addition, I had one full free day to explore the Capital of Poland. Many thanks to the European Union and Caucasus University for this opportunity!”
